There's some blackleg around. Cattle owners can ill afford to not take the precaution of vaccination.

This week we learned of one calf dying that was only two months old.

Two vaccinations appear to be necessary. One when the calf is six to eight weeks old, and the other when the calf is weaned.

* * *

Mice and rats will be looking for a place to winter if this cool weather continues.

You may like to have a copy of Publication 272 -- Rats and Their Control.

It tells about how to keep rodents out of buildings, sanitation and use of baits.

* * *

Feeder calves really sold well last Thursday in Lynchburg.

Bob McClenny marketed calves in this sale for the first time and he tells me that they will gross him close to $200 per head.

Less corn will be available for feeding this year. This points toward a lower price cattle for the next 12 months.

Some people like to buy a beef for the freezer -- wonder if this isn't going to be about the best time to make that purchase.

* * *

Sam Davidson ran some forage tests on the XL 45 corn that was mentioned in this column several weeks ago. The samples ran 30 and 33 percent TDN each.

This is probably as good silage as any that we've tested.

Dairymen can probably profit from the use of forage tests than anyone. Most dairymen are underfeeding protein and overfeeding grain supplement.

A forage test and a ration balanced accordingly can make you money.

* * *

Warning to Hog Producers!! Don't get caught trying to vaccinate hogs for cholera. This practice is in violation of Federal and State regulations.

Blood samples from selected swine going to slaughter will be taken and tested for hog cholera antibodies.

Hogs with positive tests will be refused at the slaughter house.

* * *

There's growing interest in crossbreeding of beef cattle. We've a new publication that's very readable and outlines the results of a five year test completed in this state.

Your copy is available from this office.

What's foot-long and sweet to eat? A foot-long, four and one-quarter pound potato grown by Wesley Hamlett, B&W employee, Lynchburg, and Pamplin resident. He raised a good crop of sweet potatoes and other garden vegetables this year, but says that this is the "champ!" Does anybody around have a larger one?
